CLOSE ONES OR STILL STRANGERS? INTERACTIVE INTEGRATION OF UKRAINIAN MIGRANT WOMEN MARRIED TO NATIVE POLES

Intermarriage has been argued to be a key indicator of migrants' integration into the host society. However, the data collected in the course of the qualitative research that includes in-depth interviews with migrants from Ukraine suggest that the relationship between intermarriage and integration of migrants is complex and multifaceted. The study presented in this article found that mixed unions do not have a uniform significance for the weakening of social boundaries as they do not necessarily serve to erode prejudices towards other groups associated with ethnic origin and nationality of potential partners.
